Dear Lester Snow,

I am writing to express my feelings against the CALFED dam projects. There are reasonable alternatives to adding to and creating additional dams. I am standing on the bank of the American River as I write this; without these delicate habitats there will not be the diversity needed to sustain life over time. This diversity is made up of many delicate systems that are all water fed. What may look like something small and insignificant is ACTUALLY very important and essential.

There are many ways for the human population To save water by using it more responsibly. What is needed is education for your average person who appreciates River, but may not see how the vacancies use of water is destroying them. I urge you to support the conservation of Rivers in our beautiful diverse state. I would welcome your reply.
